FactSet Named One of the UK's Best Workplaces

May 14, 2015

FactSet Research Systems Inc. (NYSE: FDS | NASDAQ: FDS), a leading provider of integrated financial information and analytical applications to the global investment community, was named by Great Place to Work® as one of the UK's Best Workplaces.

"FactSet is proud to be included again in this prestigious list," said Andrew Burton, Vice President and Director of International Human Resources. "We believe that our culture of cooperation and teamwork coupled with competitive benefits enables our employees to be happy and productive, which in turn benefits our clients."

FactSet has been named to the list every year since 2009. FactSet was included for having a high trust, high engagement workplace culture that attracts and retains talent and helps drive our business success.

The methodology behind the UK's Best Workplaces list uniquely combines both an employee survey and an audit into an organization's management and human resources practices. To be successful, participating organizations must achieve a high minimum score in their employee survey, which measures the levels of trust and engagement in an organization. The award also recognizes the strength of leadership and the range of innovative, creative, and effective HR policies that create a workplace culture.
