

WRDS adds FactSet Revere data, helping clients to uncover complex networks of companies within the global economy

September 15, 2015

Wharton Research Data Services \(WRDS\), the award-winning data research platform and business intelligence tool for corporate, academic, and government institutions worldwide, is pleased to announce the addition of FactSet Revere's unique datasets to the WRDS platform. The data is available through FactSet (NYSE: FDS | NASDAQ: FDS), a leading provider of financial information and analytics. A part of the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania, WRDS is trusted by leading universities around the world for data access and insights that accelerate impactful research and enhance learning.

FactSet Revere is the third FactSet dataset provided by WRDS, which already offers FactSet Ownership and FactSet Fundamentals. FactSet Revere supports historic research on corporate relationships, supply chains, and geographic risk exposure. FactSet Revere allows controls for different industry effects based on product revenue, and offers precision and granularity of sector peer groups. It is specifically designed to help analysts and researchers understand the geographic risks of companies, and its datasets uncover how the impacts of shock at the firm level can be aggregated into a macro effect.

"WRDS is excited to expand our FactSet offerings with the Revere datasets," said Robert Zarazowski, Managing Director of WRDS. "WRDS is known as a global leader in financial research and FactSet Revere will enhance our subscribers' ability to uncover key company relationships and risks in an increasingly networked world."

"FactSet is a thought leader in providing business intelligence through its unique content and sophisticated analytics offering to academic institutions and elite research teams in Financial Services," explains Justin D. Strand, SVP and Content Product Director at FactSet. "FactSet Revere's data solutions expose interconnections of companies supporting researchers to discover interesting themes, actionable ideas, and investment strategies."
